Abstract

Since 1975, the Current Index to Statistics (CIS) has provided bibliographic information on theoretical and applied papers and books in the statistical sciences. Recently, most of the computer files used to prepare these indexes have been modified and combined into a unified, computer searchable data base. I will mention some of the political, financial, and technical challenges to establishing the CIS Cumulative Data Base, discuss its use for statistical consulting and research, and speculate on future directions for computer searchable bibliographic data bases and for electronic publishing of statistics journals.

Biographical Notes

Dr. Trumbo has undergraduate degrees in Mathematics and Chemistry. He has graduate degrees in Statistics from the University of Chicago. He is a fellow of the IMS and presently chairs the CIS management committee and is a member of the ASA committee on publications.
